

SCREEN, SCREEN, SCREEN

Oil and Photography on canvas

“If one were truly aware of the value of human life, particularly your own child's, to waste it blithely on distractions and pursuit of vulgar ambitions would be the height of confusion and the beginning of insanity”.

This image portrays the damage caused by the age of the screen. The Game boy, the X box, the Play station, the D.S. not to mention the misuse of the Computer, Video and D.V.D.

Is your child in a constant state of dream?

The figures in this painting represent the time spent looking at screens by a generation of youngsters who are often hypnotised by the content of the game they are playing, resulting in a combined image of confused state, sometimes causing one to imitate the actions observed on the screen.

“The body, the screen and the word have great importance:

It is through their support that the true nature of mind can be realised.

It could be said that, in a way, the body, the screen and the word are the servants of the mind. They should be coherent and controlled, clear and pleasant, and should be spoken in a calm and gentle voice: they should express neither desire nor hatred”.
